

Are we building for India or just building in India?

Imagine standing on a bridge not just spanning a river, but connecting fragmented public opinion. In India, where every new railway line, metro extension, or expressway is a visible symbol of national progress, infrastructure has the potential to do more than just move people and goods; it can connect communities, instill pride, and reflect shared aspirations. Yet, this potential is often lost in controversy, suspicion, or fragmented communication.

To read more <https://etedge-insights.com/industry/real-estate/are-we-building-for-india-or-just-building-in-india/>